FATAL BALLOON ACCIDENT.

CHICAGO, July 7th. Mail reports give details of the fatal accident to the acronaut La Mountain, at Ionion, last Fridiy. His balloon was simply filled with rarified nir, hot gas. The canvas had a worn appearance; as if worse for being filled with heated air too often .. At the summit where the canvas was sown together, ablock some ten or fifteen inches in diumeter, was fastened, and through this bole six guy ropes were secured, hanging down over the sides of the balloon, being at the bottom some seventéen feet apart, and these were tied to the basket by the Professor biniself. There were no rope running around the balloon horizontally to keep the guy ropes from slipping, or to prevent the whole Hongkong and Shanghai Bank Shares, - 583 thing from slipping out between the ropes with a gust of wind. About 3.55 p.m. the profeesor stepped into the basket and the balloon took a shoot up almost perpendioularly with the Professor swinging bie hat to the crowd, all apparently enjoying the sight. A few moments later, however, the mouth of the balloon was observed to wave about two or Chinese Insurance Company .- $2174 per share. three times, then to pass between the balloon Hongking Fire Insurance Company's Sharescarcening over on one side, when the ropes broke out from the fastening at the top and the full commerced. La Mountain was noticed to be apparently making some effort to get the basket above him, and if possible to break the fall, but after the first struggle he fell so rapidly that nothing could be distinguished but the fulling body, his hat coming after him about one hundred feet or more behind, the old canvas, nearly collapsed—faling down gradually and with such a terrible thud that it jarred the ground for fifty rods around, and made an indentation in the solid ground for eight inches deen. There was sourcely a bone in the whole body not broken into fragments. It was as limp as a ray, and there werevery few fractures of the skin except the right foot. The bone of the right leg was driven through the bottom of the foot .- Alta. BALLS.

On the whole, it is remarkable what an im mense fund of good-humour is displayed by valsers in a growded room. Collisions are nocepted with the atmost placidity, and provoke only a smile. And even the terrible ordenl of a full-than which no moment of ball-room existence is more trying-is undergone without loss of temper. Falls ought to be very rare except when men appear in aniform; then the much abused spurs catch in trimmings and bindings, and occasion many a fall. On one occasion, at a full-dress ball, a lady was seen a one side of the room with her dress caught in the spar of a man who was at the other side of the room. Between the two was a linge length of binding, on and over which dancers were in the greatest possible danger of tripping. Spurs spoil dresses as well as tempers. It is questionable whether they are of much use in the field; they are of neither ornament nor use in the ball-room; and the aconer the authorities free men from the duty of wearing them there, the better.

There is one point in regard to the manners of men which is hable to be misunderstood. "Did Mr. A. dance with you, dear?" "No mamma." "How very rude, when I asked him to dinner last week." Now, any man who has heen going out for three or four seasons, will find it impossible to go into a ball-room without finding there far more partners than be can dance with in one evening. Some of them be must neglect, unless he were to cut himself into pleces of divide dances between two or more partners, "It is quite a mistake for those with Boilers, CENTRIPUGAL PUMPS, TURBINE whom he does not dance to imagine themselves purposely left, in the shade. If Mr. A. is a parli, and is bunted by

" the planners Of matches for Laura and Jane,"

he is very likely to vote the whole thing a bore, and avoid dancing altogether. If he is not a parti, he will perhaps devote himself entirely to chatting with the chaperons instead of dancing with the girls. It is fortunate for the chaperons that there are some men who will do this. An occasional bit of chat must be an enjoyable variation of the endless duty of watching, watching, watching, half-asleep, yet, obliged to keep awake, through the endless succession of rounds and squares. It has often seemed wonderful that a sort of Chaperona' Co-operative Scolety is not concocted, and that some few ladies of undoubted stability and wakefulness are not told off to do the duty at each ball for the whole number. Such an arrangeinent would enable ninety per cent. of those who now wait anxiously for the time when the carriage is ordered and the "just one more " is over, to be comfortably in bed, without interfering with the happiness or safety !

of their young people. With many people a ball is not considered can correspond or act as Shipping Clerk if reperfect unless it finishes with a cotillon. There | quired. Testimonials first-class. are men who devote themselves to the encontagement of this idea, and who hop about I London with the sole object of learning new figures, or taking care that the old ones are properly performed. It is possible to imagine TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR a more worthy career than that of a cotillon--leader, but it is fortunate that there are to be To H. J. H. THE GRAND DUKE ALEXIS OF found men who think themselves happy if they are allowed to adopt it. In more than one of the large houses in London the catillon is the most important part of an evening's amusement. The utmost magnificence murks its course. The presents given by the men to the ladies, which are provided with lavisbuess, are valuable and of beauty. The figures are splendidly got up, and the whole thing is done as well as possible. But it is a question, nevertheless, whether even so a cotillon is an enjoyable dance. It is all very well in a small party, where every one knows every one else, but in a large town ball it is open to attack. Its essence is rivalry. One is preferred, the other rejected. Such a goodhumonred contest may be very well among TO ROWN. JONES & CO. friends, but it is questionable among strangers. More then one leader of a cotilled found this last year, and discovered that even men did not like to kneel at the feet of a strange young lady in the middle of the room, and be scornfully rejected. The dancers have to be too much en évidence, have to put themselves forward too. much. If the cutillon is to be danced, it ought to be the invariable practice that the men are bumiliated, and the women bave it all their own way. The idea is that the utmost female caprice | the name of Hing Kee. is encouraged—that the woman is a tyrant before which men bow down. But oven if this principle is always carried out-and this is not so—the feeling that comparisons are odious makes a cotillon not quite thoroughly liked. In as above, where a list of prices of articles will the little world of the ball-room many of those feelings, phases of character, and motives of rate all the year round. -action come into play, which influence life in the graver world outside. The pride of the proud, the cynicism of the cynic, the kindliness of the warm-hearted, the softness of the gentle -all these are attributes which to no small extent affect the intercourse of people in a ballroom. Habits are formed, developed, or unlearned, which come not to an end when the time of ball-going is over. And the disposition which will be esteemed or loved in real life, will be popular in society. As the man is most popular who thinks and gives no offence, whose good humour attributes the best motives to every action, who goes through the world happy himself and using his best endeavours to make other people the same; so the girl who is never offended, never rude, who laughs if she is "thrown over," and who does not think that her friends mean to be unkind to her, will find herself with most partners and with the greatest capacity of enjoying her ballgoing as well as her after life.

ENGLISH AND OHINESE DICTIONARY WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinsse Dictionary, published at the Daily Frees Office, Hongkong.

FOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objectsin machinery photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle litherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast 1 0 2 economy of space, achieving a clearness not 120 previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have | Selected by the undersigned, may be had for heretofore characterized Chinese publications. $24. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Chalmers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto pub-For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chiness. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally. THE HOUSEHOLD COMPANION It comprises upwards of two thousand large

GONE ARE THE YANKEES. A COCKNEY WAIL. The great Padfic journey I have done, In many a town and tent I've found a lodgment I think I've travelled to the setting suu. And very nearly reached the Day of Judgment Like Launcelet, in quest of Holy Grail,

From Western Beershoba to Yankee Dan I've been a seeker, yet I sadly fail To find the genuine type American. Where is the object of my youthful wonder, Who met me in the pages of Sam Slick? Who opened every sentence with By thunder, And whit led always on a bit of stick. The more thogrowd of friends around methickens, The less my chance to meet him seems to be;

To Dixon, Sda, Trollope, not to me? No one accostsme with the words, Wa'al stranger; Greets me as Festive Cuss, or shouts Old Hoss! No grim six-shooter threatens me with danger, If I don't quickly pass the butter, boss. Round friendly boards no cocktail even passes No brandy smash my owning hour besets. And petticoateure worn by all the lasses, And the pianes don't wear partalettes.

Why did he freely show himself to Dickens,

The ladies, when you offer chicken salad, Don't say, I'm pretty eroioded now, I guess; They don't sing Mrs. Barney Williams' bailads Of "Bobbing Round," nov add Sir-es to yes. I, too, have sat, like every other fellow. In many a railway, omnibus, street car:

No girl has spiked me with a fierce umbrella, And said. You git, I mean to sit right than: Gone are the Yankees of my early readings! Faded the Tankee land of oager guests! I meet with ellture, courtesy, good breeding, Art, letters, men and women of the best. Oh! fellow Britons, all my hopes are undone? Take counsil of a disappointed man! Don't come outhers, but stay at home in London And seek inbooks the true American.

THE SKULL OF SHAKESPEARE. A certain French Baron, whose scientific tastes led him to collect the skulls of celebrated person, one day received a visit from a man with whom he was accustomed to

"What do you bring me here?" asked the Baron, as the man slowly unwrapped a carefully enveloped package. "The skull of Shakespeare."

"Impossible!" "I speak the truth, Monsieur le Baron. Here is proof of what I say," said the dealer. producing some papers.

the drapery which concented his own singular. collection, "I already possess that skull." "He must have been a regue who sold you that," was the remark of the honest dealer. "Who was it, Mousieur?" "Your father," said the Baron in a mild tone, " he sold it to me about twenty-nine year ago.'' The broker was for a moment disconcerted, then explained, with vivacity:

"I comprehend. Be good enough to observe the small dimensions of the skull on your shelf. Remark the narrow occiput, the undeveloped forehead, where intelligence is still mute: It is of Shakespeare certainly, but Shakespeare as a child about 12 or 14 years old, whereas this is that of Shakespeare when he had attained a certain age, and had become the great genius of which England is so justly proud.

The Baron bought the second head.

THE BULLFINCH.

This bird is common in all parts of our island, and, in a wild state, is very-destructive in the spring to the buds that contain the blossom of different fruits, especially stone fruit, such as plums and cherries. It has been said these birds go for a "small maggot," but whether there is a small maggot in some of the buds or not is best known to the eater of the blossom-it is very positive the bullfach does not leave us a chance to see, after it has inserted its strong bill into it. I have known trees perfectly stripped of bloom by these birds, leaving a strong proof of the damage done, on the ground below, the proof being buds, scales, and fragments of flowers. They are very partial to ripe raspberries in summer, and I have no doubt they find them very refreshing. the autumn and winter they feed on seeds, such as the fost-bitten blackberry, herbs of various kinds, the ash, and many more seeds, which they find either on the ground or still hanging on their stems. At this time of the year they go in small flocks of pairs, and, when disturbed, fly off singly, one taking the lead, the others following individually until all have left the place where only a few seconds before they were perhaps partaking of a meal; if this occurs on a bedge it is often repeated in short distances for a long way down the side, until they either come to another hedge or settle on the boughs of a tree. They are more often seen on the ash than on any other; if this tree stands in the hedgerow, they are almost sure not to pass it; but if disturbed here, they will often fly over the intruder's head to the place where they first started .- From "Out door Common"

CHRISTMAS HEATHENISM. Christmas in England is scarcely the shadow of its former merry, brilliant self, when all classes of society united around a common banquet table, indulged in the most unrestrained joviality and merrimont. The wassail bowl, that once played so conspicuous a part at the Christmas, banquet, has become obsolets, while the old-time toast of "Drine heil," or "Was hail," from which the bowl derives its name, has given place 'to the modern "Come, here's to you," or "I'll pledge you." Then, too, the singing of Christmas carols, which was once so popular even at court has greatly fallen into disuse, and is now principally confined to the lower classes. Even the traditional mistletce, around which gathers so much posey and romance, and under which coy maidens coquettishly courted the hiss of their present or prospective lovers, is now excluded from the churches as a relic of paganism, has been banished by slow degrees from its high post of favour; while the Yule-block,or Christmaslog, with its warm welcome, extending even to the poor and the stranger as they gathered around the hospitable board, is being gradually supplanted by the Christmas-treewhose introduction into England is comparatively of recent date. But if the Lord of Misrule has been the loser. Christain civilisaobservance of the Christmas festivities in England. The Christmas-tree sheds it mellow radiance over a more quiet but not less enjoyable scepe. Churches and home sanctuaries robe themselves in evergreen holly, ivy and laurel. Generous rations of beef and bread are distributed to the parish poor on Christmaseve by jewelled hands, while the Christmas bells still ring out their silvery chimes on the crisp morning air joyfully and cheerfully. Nor is there wanting a spicy flavour of the old-time feasting and frolic, when there "was brought in the lasty brawn By old blue coated serving man; Then the grim bour's head frowned on high, Crested with bays and rosemary.

White round the merry wassall bowl, Garnished with ribbons, blithe did trowl." To say nothing of the roast beef and plumpudding, Christmas pies, furmity, and snapdragons, the Yule-log and the mistletoe have not finally abdicated, while the boar's head, decorated with rosemary or prickly holly, maintains its place at the English Christmas dinner, and is still served up in great state at the Royal Christmas dinner.-" Christmas throughout Christendom," in Harper's New Monthly Magazine.

A HURBICANE IN THE CRIMEA. Within a week after the battle of Inkermann a storm of terrific violence swept over the Black Sea, producing indescribable confusion among the ships of war and the transports. . . The hurricans which had caused the disasters on the sea produced consequences even more terrible on the land. It came rushing over the plateau on which the greater part of the English army was stationed, carrying away the tents, breaking the tent-poles, tearing the canvas to tatters, bearing off the baggage of officers and men, drenching its contents with rain, tearing the very mul from the rocks and dashing it in the faces of the soldiers, who were attempting to save something from the general wreck. Such was the violence of the storm, that much of the stores of the commissariat was blown away, and those who had the care of them were so occupied with endeavours to preserve what was left as to be unable to serve out the rations to the mon; the cooking fires were extinguished, the very coverlets that afforded a last shelter to the wounded and sick were carried away; and many of these poor creatures, exposed to the cold blast and the rain, without help or protection, found an end to their sufferings in, death. Some of those, too, who had previously been in good health succumbed under the privations and cold to which they were now exposed. Never, perhaps did an army pass a more wretched night than that spent by our brave troops on the heights above Inkermann during and after this storm. Without shelter, food, or fire, wet, cold, and comfortless, they had to lie down to rest, and if possible to sleep, on the mud, to which rain and the trampling of many men and animals had reduced the surface of their position.-From "The History of England from the year 1880," by W. Nassau Moles--London Figure.
